History

The name of Lluçmajor is probably composed by the Latin words LUCUS MAIORIS, which mean "greater forest".

The prehistoric settlement of Capocorb Vell, in the south of Lluçmajor, is the most known exponent of the Bronze Age. It represents a myth within the prehistoric investigation thanks to its conservation and it is one of the most important talayotic settlements in the East Mediterranean.

After trading relations were established with Phoenicians, Greeks and Carthaginians, the Romans occupied the island in 123 BC, founding the cities of Pollentia and Palmaria. As well the Vandals occupied Mallorca, followed by the Byzantines and later the Arabs, who took over Mallorca in 902, leaving an indelible cultural imprint for three centuries.

On December 31st, 1229 Mallorca was conquered by King James I beginning the conquest of the island for the Aragon's kingdom. After the king's death, in 1276, his kingdom was divided among his sons and, in this way; the independent kingdom of Mallorca was established. During this period, the King James II founded Lluçmajor in 1300.

We have to emphasize, that the most important milestone of our history has been the Battle of Lluçmajor, which took place on October 25th, 1349. In this combat, James III, the last king of Mallorca, was defeated and he lost his kingdom, thus being annexed to the kingdom of Aragon.

During the centuries 14th to 18th the south coast of Mallorca suffered the continuous threat of pirates and corsairs expeditions, which attacked the Mallorca coast without breath. The island inhabitants built watchtowers along the coast and established a warning signal system. The towers of S'Estelella, Cap Blanc and Cala Pi are witnesses of those fights.

Along the history, the Spanish Crown granted Lluçmajor several privileges:

543, Emperor Charles I of Spain and V of Germany granted Lluçmajor the real privilege to celebrate fairs from September 29th to October 18th, as well as a weekly market. The fairs and the weekly market take place still nowadays.

1916, King Alfonse XIII granted Lluçmajor the title of "ciutat" (city).

The first decades of the 20th century in Lluçmajor are marked by a series of chained events that marked a stage of progress and development. There is a fort demographic increase that corresponds with a stage of economic expansion. The strong industrialization, especially in the branch of the footwear, has disappeared practically, being today the services and tourism industry the most outstanding.
